

Regular Special Term Of Supreme Court Here Was Exceptionally Light

In Addition To Signing Several Orders There Were Two Habeas Corpus Writs Returnable Before Justice Foster Today.

TWO WRITS DENIED

Two inmates sought release, one from the Wallkill Prison, the other from Napanoch.

A regular special term of supreme court was held this morning before Justice Foster at the court house here. There was an exceptionally light term. In addition to signing several orders there were two habeas corpus writs returnable, one from the Medium Security Prison at Wallkill where an inmate sought release and one from Napanoch Institution. Both were denied.

The applicant from Napanoch had been granted a parole by the parole board on condition his father in Florida send the necessary funds for transportation. The funds have not been forthcoming and since that was the condition under which the parole board granted the application of release he was remanded to the custody of the institution, the application for release denied and it was suggested by the court that the case be considered again by the parole board and if the applicant's record was clear that he be released and the necessary fare be provided. The applicant, a colored man, stated his father was 72 years old, the father of several small children and now living on a $40 a month relief pension. He said his father had no funds to send for car fare although promises had been made to send the money. Applicant said he had been earning his own living since he was a small boy and could again do so if sent back to Florida.

Estimates Too High, Ellenville School Bids Returned to Senders

Bids recently received by the Ellenville Board of Education for building a new grade school building, auditorium and gymnasium and alterations in the present high school building, showed large increases over costs estimated when the architect's plans were approved some months since, and exceeded the amount authorized by the taxpayers of the school district.

A total of $109,000, which included a PWA grant, had been authorized. Bids for the general contract ran from $98,192 to $109,423. In addition bids were submitted for the electrical work, heating and ventilating, plumbing, on which contracts the low bids were: electrical, $7,400; heating and ventilating, $19,263; plumbing, $7,765.

At a recent meeting the Board considered the proposition to reject all bids and the architect was directed to make certain changes and alterations in the plans with the possibility that on a resubmission the bids might be brought within the amount of the appropriation authorized. Before new plans can be submitted for bids they must have the approval of the PWA and of the State Department of Education.

Private Citizens Again

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 4 (AP).—James L. Whitley, with a congressional record of 21 years, never equalled in Monroe county and seldom exceeded in the state, today stepped back into the role of private citizen. Whitley, defeated in the last election as Republican representative from the 38th congressional district, retired at the official close of the 73rd Congress last night.

Former Senator Harrison Dead

Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 4 (AP).—Former State Senator Henry Harrison was dead here today at the age of 80. He died at his home last night. From 1896 to 1898 he represented the 45th district in the State Senate. Until his retirement in 1926, he was president of the Henry Harrison Company, Inc., grain, farm produce and agricultural implement dealers.

11 Dead in Canada

Winnipeg, Jan. 4 (AP).—Western Canada counted 11 dead today after a three day attack by blizzards, snow-drifts and gas explosions. Blizzards left five dead, snowdrifts took three lives while gas fumes took two and a gas explosion accounted for another. Chill winds still whipped snow and impaired vision but temperatures on the prairies were moderating from 20 below zero to around five or ten below.

Lindbergh Says Voice of Man Who Got $50,000 in Bills Was Hauptmann's

Father of Slain Child Said He Heard the Man Who Took the Vain Ransom Payment Say, "Hey, Doctor," and That Was Hauptmann's Voice—Defense Counsel Announced He Would Show Crime Was Concealed in the Lindbergh Home Itself.

FIRST WEEK OF HAUPTMANN TRIAL ENDS THIS AFTERNOON

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 4 (AP).—The first week of the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann ends this afternoon.

Justice Thomas W. Trenchard acceded to the wishes of counsel for prosecution and defense and ruled there would be no Saturday session.

When court adjourns at four o'clock it will be to resume at 10 a. m. Monday.

Betty Gow So Shaken She Couldn't Testify

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 4 (AP).—The ordeal from which Anne Lindbergh emerged bravely today left Betty Gow, nurse of Anne's kidnapped baby, so shaken she could not testify.

The young Scotch girl, last member of the Lindbergh household to see the child alive, sat with quivering lips as Mrs. Lindbergh's gentle voice reviewed the tragedy for 45 minutes yesterday at the Hauptmann trial.

The nurse, who was next on the prosecution's list of witnesses, responded when Attorney General David T. Wilentz said: "Will Miss Betty Gow please take the stand?"

She crossed the court room to a chair near the prosecution's table. The attorneys leaned toward her anxiously and conferred.

Then Wilentz announced, "If the court please, I will call Colonel Lindbergh instead." Miss Gow, trembling, went back to her place beside Mrs. Elsie Wheatley, widow of the Lindbergh butler.

"She was so affected by Mrs. Lindbergh's testimony that we thought it advisable to call Colonel Lindbergh," Wilentz said later.

The nurse, whose name was the first word the kidnapped baby spoke, seemed sensitive to every current in the court room. Her alert dark eyes compared the two young mothers in the picture. Mrs. Lindbergh, a small figure in black with a pale, calm face, and Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, also in black—a large-framed woman with a worn face and red-brown hair.

Miss Gow will follow Colonel Lindbergh on the witness stand, but probably not until Monday, for Edward J. Reilly, head of the defense counsel, said he will cross-examine Lindbergh for several hours. Court probably will not be held tomorrow.

Hauptmann Affected By Dramatic Events

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 4 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann tried in vain today to cloak with his usual composure evidences of nervousness aroused by the dramatic events of his trial.

His guards said he appeared affected deeply after being called by the attorney general "the man who murdered that baby," and after hearing the testimony of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

In the seclusion of Hunterdon county's number 1 jail cell, he ate only a light meal at the noon recess yesterday. He ate more heartily last night, scalloped potatoes, seven pieces of rye bread and several cups of coffee.

Then he tried to read a book provided by the warden, but apparently he could not hold himself to it, and soon jumped up to pace the hall outside his cell.

Nervously, he threw himself on his cot and as an officer whom he sees infrequently appeared, he quickly picked up the book once more. "He wasn't reading a word in that book," the officer said, "but he tried to make it appear that he was."

TB Hospital Auxiliary Will Meet Monday

Mrs. Reynolds Carr will be the hostess at tea served after the meeting and any ladies in the county who are interested in the big movement aimed to eradicate tuberculosis are heartily invited to attend.

(By WILLIAM A. KINNEY)

(Copyright, 1935, by The Associated Press) Flemington, N. J., Jan. 4 (AP).—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh today identified the voice of Bruno Richard Hauptmann as that of the man who took ransom for his kidnapped child in a Bronx cemetery and then was subjected to a cross-examination that sought to place the plot within the Lindbergh home.

Lindbergh, speaking in a low firm voice, said he heard the man who took the vain ransom payment say "Hey, doctor."

He told the court and jury: "That was Hauptmann's voice." Earlier in the day defense Counsel Edward J. Reilly had announced the defense would show that Hauptmann "had nothing to do with the crime and that it was conceived in the Lindbergh home itself, but not by any member of the family."

"Further," that "the kidnapping was planned and executed by a gang of five persons, whose names, naturally, we cannot disclose at this time." From the onset, after asking if Lindbergh was armed and receiving an answer of "No," Reilly directed his cross-examination towards his announced line, asking sharp questions about the background of the Lindbergh servants.

The fiercest direct identification of Hauptmann's voice brought a flush to the defendant's face. He sat rigid and swallowed.

Reilly made the fiercer show with a pointer and the state's charts, the layout of the nursery and home, and wanted to know from him how servants moved about the house.

He was especially insistent upon the probability that no persons outside of the Lindbergh home would know that the Lindberghs were forced to stay in Hopewell over time on the fateful week-end in March, 1932, because the baby had a cold. Colonel Lindbergh had testified they had usually returned to Englewood on Sunday afternoon. The baby was taken on Tuesday night, March 1, 1932.

As to whether a person or a "gang" on the outside world would have knowledge as to the movements, Colonel Lindbergh said:

"Well, that depends upon their organization."

Lindbergh talked in low and firm tones, seemed at ease. Once he grained when he defended the police against the cross-examiner's assertion that they were "not infallible." Lindbergh testified there were no fingerprints on the ransom notes, only smudges.

Court was recessed from 12:30 to 1:45 p. m.

The third day of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's trial for life began at 10:01 a. m. today, with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh returning to the witness stand to continue his direct testimony.

The jury was in court early and posed for innumerable photographs. The flash bulbs of the photographers blooming in bright spots of light all over the courtroom.

The opposing legal staffs also were on hand before Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard appeared on the bench. There were frequent short, whispered conferences at defense and prosecution tables.

The ransom notes in their transparent cellophane envelopes received much attention by the state attorney. The buzz of conversation died down as Justice Trenchard mounted the bench and the jury roll was called.

Then Hauptmann looking paler and more deep eyed than usual was brought into court with his state trooper and deputy sheriff guards. He did not pause to talk to his counsel as he did yesterday.

Lindbergh, who was on the stand at adjournment yesterday, entered court four minutes after Justice Trenchard.

He wore the same gray suit as yesterday, a blue shirt and blue and white striped tie.

He was accompanied by Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the Jersey State Police.

Photographers warned. Justice Trenchard after a stern warning to photographers that no pictures be taken in court, opened the trial with, "If the counsel are ready, Col. Lindbergh you may take the stand."

The aviator then took long strides to the stand. He crossed his long legs, thrust one arm over the back of his chair, and smiled slightly.

Hauptmann fixed his pale blue eyes on the flying colonel as the testimony progressed. Lindbergh, now crowned, hands clasped, looked straight at Attorney General David T. Wilentz, who questioned him.

"Now, Colonel, you were telling us about the second note you received and getting away from that moment and returning to the home again you said you went into the room. I think

President Proposes Revision of the Entire Federal Relief

President's Relief Program For Future Outlined In His Message

The following excerpt from the President's message to the 74th Congress today shows what the plans of the chief executive are in connection with relief in the future during his administration:

This new program of emergency public employment should be governed by a number of practical principles.

(1) All work undertaken should be useful—not just for a day, or a year, but useful in the sense that it affords permanent improvement in living conditions or that it creates future new wealth for the nation.

(2) Compensation on emergency public projects should be in the form of security payments which should be larger than the amount now received as a relief dole, but at the same time not so large as to encourage the rejection of opportunities for private employment or the leaving of private employment to engage in government work.

(3) Projects should be undertaken on which a large percentage of direct labor can be used.

(4) Preference should be given to those projects which will be self-liquidating in the sense that there is a reasonable expectation that the government will get its money back at some future time.

(5) The projects undertaken should be selected and planned so as to compete as little as possible with private enterprises. This suggests that if it were not for the necessity of giving useful work to the unemployed now on relief, these projects in most instances would not now be undertaken.

(6) The planning of projects would seek to assure work during the coming fiscal year to the individuals now on relief or until such time as private employment is available. In order to make adjustment to increasing private employment, work should be planned with a view to tapering it off in proportion to the speed with which the emergency workers are offered positions with private employers.

(7) Effort should be made to locate projects where they will serve the greatest unemployment needs as shown by present relief rolls, and the broad program of the national resources board should be freely used for guidance in selection. Our ultimate objective being the enrichment of human lives, the government has the primary duty to use its emergency expenditures as much as possible to serve those who cannot secure the advantages of private capital.

D. A. R. Meets With State Treasurer

Wiltwyck Chapter D. A. R., had the honor of entertaining Miss Page Schwarzwaelder, state treasurer, at a luncheon held at the Governor Clinton Hotel on Thursday and at the regular monthly meeting at the chapter house following the luncheon.

Miss Louise W. van Hoeverberg, regent, presided at the meeting. The regent announced that a New Testament which also contained the Palms had been presented to the chapter by Mrs. W. J. Cranston. The chaplain, Mrs. J. D. Lawrence, read the Seventeenth Psalm which was followed by the pledge of allegiance to the flag and the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner." Regent announced a meeting of the Incorporated Society to be held on February 5, at 2:30, at the chapter house for the purpose of electing officers and three trustees. A substantial contribution was voted to be given to the Industrial Home and to the Salvation Army. Two copies of "Old Gravesones of Ulster County" were presented to the chapter by Mrs. A. T. Clearwater. One copy will be sent to the National Society in Washington to be placed in the Library of Continental Hall as was requested. A gift of two Indian heads was given by Miss Gertrude Van Keuren to add to the museum pieces.

The election of delegates and alternates to the Continental Congress then took place.

They are as follows: Regent, Miss von Hoeverberg; regent's alternate, Mrs. Frederick Chidsey; delegate, Mrs. Charles Terwilliger; delegate's alternate, Mrs. John H. Saxe.

The following alternates were elected: Mrs. Harris C. Inglis, Miss Julianna Wood, Mrs. Prescott, J. Clapp, Mrs. James A. McCommons, Mrs. Hiram F. Whitney, Mrs. Frederick Snyder, Mrs. C. Ray Everett and Mrs. William Macgregor Mills.

Following the business meeting Miss Schwarzwaelder gave a very interesting talk. She told of her work as state treasurer the past three years, explaining how the money was spent. Many things had been accomplished, she said. New York state had contributed liberally toward the wiping out of the debt on Constitution Hall. A room had been furnished in the 17th century mansion in the old Fort Stanwix mansion at Rensselaer. Money for scholarships had been given for students at Tamworth, Kate Dunca Smith School and Crotonah, all approved schools. A group of students will give a demonstration at one of the New York theatres on April 8, thus showing what is being accomplished through the efforts of the D. A. R.

Miss Schwarzwaelder praised Wiltwyck Chapter for its efforts to start a Junior group saying that this was needed to carry on the work of the organization.

A group of soprano soloists was sung in a very pleasing manner by Miss Evelyn Saxe, accompanied by Mrs. William Macgregor Mills.

"The Star" was sung by Miss Margaret Macgregor Mills, accompanied by Mrs. William Macgregor Mills.

Dr. Percy Batley Dies, Former Psychiatrist At Napanoch Institute

At Time of Death Was Head of Bedford State Reformatory for Women—Removed 30-Year Smoking Ban at Napanoch.

Bedford Hills, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Dr. Percy Batley, superintendent of the State Reformatory for Women here, died Thursday of heart disease at his residence on the institution grounds. He was forty-five years old.

Dr. Walter N. Thayer, Jr., State Commissioner of Correction, telegraphed to Miss Louise Engle, assistant superintendent, instructing her to assume charge of the institutions as acting superintendent.

Dr. Batley had headed the correctional units here since July 1, 1932. He was born in Walnut, Iowa, a son of Herbert V. and Lena Batley. He was a graduate of the Troughon University School of Medicine in Omaha, Neb., in 1911. He was a physician at the Iowa State Hospital until the World War, when he became a captain in the Medical Corps, retiring from the service as a major in the Medical Reserve Corps.

After the war Dr. Batley was appointed surgeon of the Connecticut State Prison at Wethersfield. He turned to psychiatry and in 1927 was appointed psychiatrist at the State Institution for Defective Delinquents at Napanoch, in Ulster county, N. Y., of which he became assistant superintendent. Among the changes of policy which he instituted after assuming charge here was the removal of a 30-year ban on smoking at the reformatory, distributing more than 200 packages of cigarettes to prisoners at Christmas in 1932. As superintendent of the local correctional plants he was in charge of more than 400 prisoners and 200 employees.

Dr. Batley was a member of the American Psychiatric Association and the American Orthopsychiatric Association. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Laura Maxwell Ryan Batley, three brothers, Herbert, Earl and Carl Batley, of Omaha, and a sister, Mrs. R. E. Gowdy, of Hartford, Conn.

In His Annual Message To Congress, Chief Executive Declares Government Must and Shall Quit This Business of Relief.

ABANDON DOLE

Says Immediate Plans Were Intended to be Undertaken Within Sound Credit of Government.

Washington, Jan. 4 (AP).—President Roosevelt proposed to Congress today the revision of the entire federal relief structure, entailing abandonment of the dole in favor of a vast public works job-making plan. Envisioning a "new order" where social security would be more widely assured, he at the same time said the immediate plan was intended to be undertaken "within the sound credit of the government."

Detailing the scope of his employment proposals in his annual message to Congress, he told the joint session of the Senate and House:

"This work will cover a wide field, including clearance of slums, which for adequate reasons can not be undertaken by private capital; in rural housing of several kinds, where, again, private capital is unable to function; in rural electrification; in the reforestation of the great watersheds of the nation; in an intensified program to prevent soil erosion and to reclaim blighted areas; in improving existing road systems and in constructing national highways designed to handle modern traffic; in the elimination of grade crossings; in the extension and enlargement of the successful work of the Civilian Conservation Corps; in non-federal work, mostly self-liquidating and highly useful to local divisions of government; and on many others which the nation needs and can not afford to neglect."

Promising an "American plan for the American people," the President proposed that the government assure security of livelihood, security against hazards, and security of decent homes—a program which because of many long years will take many future years to fulfill.

He said the new work relief effort "fits logically and usefully into the long range permanent policy of providing the three types of security."

"The Federal government must and shall quit this business of relief," he emphasized.

"I am not willing that the vitality of our people be further sapped by the giving of cash, of market baskets, of a few hours of weekly cutting grass, raking leaves or picking up papers in the public parks. We must preserve not only the bodies of the unemployed from destitution, but also their self respect, their self reliance and courage and determination."

"This decision brings me to the problem of what the government should do with approximately 5,000,000 unemployed now on the relief rolls."

He said that 1,500,000 of these belonged in the past on local and state welfare rolls.

"It is my thought," he added, "that in the future they must be cared for as they were before. I stand ready through my own personal efforts, and through the public influence of the office that I hold, to help these local agencies to get the means necessary to assume this burden."

New And Enlarged Plan

For the other 3,500,000 the President proposed that "all emergency public works shall be united in a single new and greatly enlarged plan."

He proposed that this agency take over the Federal Relief Administration and that the latter be liquidated immediately.

Mr. Roosevelt reserved for his budget message to be delivered on Monday the exact amount of funds wanted for the gigantic new work relief program but he said "I assure you now that the figures will be within the sound credit of the government."

The Foreign Field

In the foreign field, Mr. Roosevelt reported an unsettled situation. "On the surface of things many old jealousies are resurrected, old passions aroused, new stirrings for armament and power, in more than one land, rear their ugly heads. I hope that calm counsel and constructive leadership will provide the steady influence and the time necessary for the coming of new and more practical forms of government."

It was the way he addressed himself to the relief question that caught main cabinet attention. States and communities in the future and "a state of some 1,500,000 unemployed" which now on Federal rolls, he said, before turning to the problem which will govern the new program, to supplant FERA.

Republicans Charge "Steam Roller" Tactics

State Chairman Eaton Launches First of a Series of Attacks on Democratic Legislative Leaders—Happ Postmaster Farley.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 4 (P).—The Republicans, slipping gracefully into the role of minority party, today launched the first of a series of attacks on the Democratic legislative leaders, charging that they are using "steam-roller tactics" to rush Governor Herbert H. Lehman's program through.

The attack came from Republican State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton who, it is understood, will issue statements from time to time on legislative questions.

With the Democrats in control, the Republicans will be unable to pass any controversial legislation of their own or to block any of the Democratic legislation, but they plan to devote their efforts to winning back public support for the party.

They expect to do this by: 1.—Pointing out mistakes of the Democrats and assailing their partisan legislation.

2.—Advocating a "liberal" program of their own.

The legislative program will be discussed by Eaton, Republican county chairman and legislators here next Wednesday. The legislative leaders will then draft their bills and introduce them at once.

For the first time in many years, leaders of the Assembly mapped a program. This is one of the results of the "New Deal" in leadership. Former Speaker Joseph A. McGinnis, who led the Republican Assemblymen for 10 years, contended that the state leader should not "meddle" with the Legislature.

The new leader, Assemblyman Irving M. Ives, is a close friend of the state chairman and comes from his own county of Chenango. He expects to consult with him frequently.

In an attack on the Democrats today, the state chairman scored Postmaster General James A. Farley, Democratic state chairman, for the part he took in the opening of the Legislature.

With a view to exercising the reins of all roughshod tactics, Eaton said, "the Democrats brought to Albany the postmaster general of the United States and sat him in the middle of the Assembly chamber in order to give him plenty of room to swing his patronage whip on legislators of his own political faith who had let it be known they would vote as their consciences dictated."

"Finally, attempting what they fondly imagined as a coup, they loaded the legislative hopper with all manner of measures. Intent on pressing for the passage of these bills without adequate time being given for analysis or suitable consideration. Is this a sample of the non-partisan philosophy urged by Governor Lehman in his message to the Legislature?"

Experiment With Camels

Did Not Last Long Here

In 1855, when Jefferson Davis was secretary of war at Washington—later to become president of the Southern Confederacy in the war between the states—congress appropriated $80,000 for the purchase of camels to be used in military operations in the dry regions of the Southwest territory. Lieut. David D. Porter, afterward to become famous as admiral of the navy, was designated to command a vessel to go to Egypt and buy the camels. The ship returned with thirty-three camels and several native drivers. The animals cost $200 each. Next year another shipload, forty-one camels, arrived. Both lots were concentrated at Camp Verde, Texas, and a permanent camp was established to breed the animals and experiment in their use.

During 1857, according to the Kansas City Times, camels were used occasionally in short scouting expeditions and in building a wagon road from Ft. Defiance, N. M., to the eastern frontier of California. Lieutenant Heale, in charge, was so enthusiastic about their usefulness that Secretary of War John B. Floyd, who had succeeded Jefferson Davis, recommended the purchase of 1,000 camels, but congress took no action on this proposal.

The outbreak of the Civil war put an end to the exploring expeditions with the camels. In March, 1868, all of them had been sold, mostly to circus men.

Resistance of Glass to

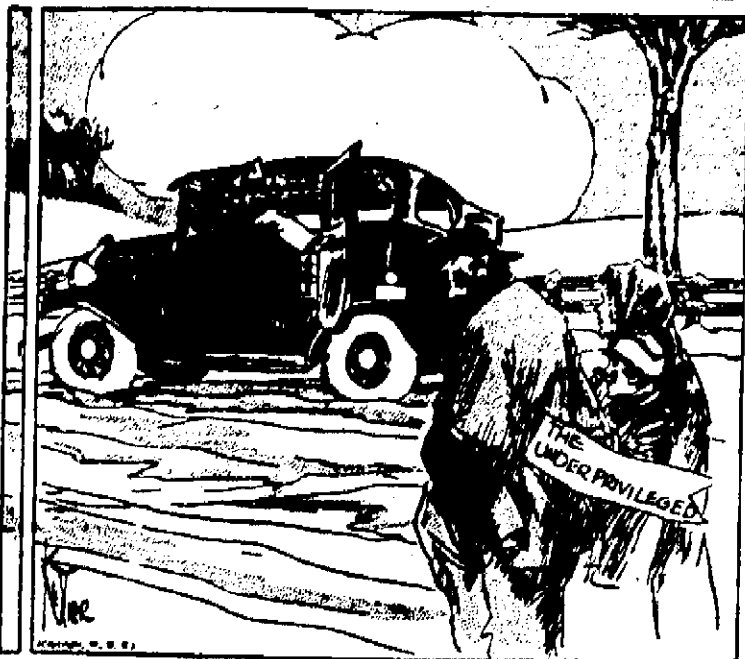

Crushing Is Very Great

Although glass has been known a long time and is even found in nature as obsidian, a black opaque glass, it has remained for the scientist to show what man can do. "As brittle as glass" is an old saying which cannot be said to be truthful any more. In fact, glass will maintain its shape under pressure which will make metals bend like putty," says Popular Mechanics Magazine.

This is hard to believe but tests at a glass factory, where every kind of glass from bottle glass to that used in the largest telescope made, show that this is true. The resistance of glass to crushing is extremely great. It would take about eight loaded freight cars weighing about 250 tons, or 700,000 pounds, to crush a two-inch cube of hard glass. Even cast iron will yield before this hard glass.

There are three main kinds of glass. There is the soda-lime variety which comes to make up bottles and window panes. Sand, lime and carbonate of soda, the ordinary raw materials, go into such glass. Lead glass contains lead oxide instead of lime. The old glass, so popular years ago, was lead glass which has great brilliancy and can be given a high polish. Glass can be made with an iron load so that the weight will be equal to that of gray cast iron. Such glass can be used to protect X-ray apparatus without the dangerous effect of these rays.

Give Them a Lift

STONE RIDGE

Stone Ridge, Jan. 3.—The watch-night service held in the M. E. Church was well attended, although several who expected to be present were confined to their homes by illness. The pastor, the Rev. Roscoe Strivings, opened the worship program by congregational singing of hymns followed by sentence prayers and reading of the Scripture. The pianist, Mrs. Ransom, being ill, Miss Edna Miller very kindly assisted at the piano. The Rev. Mr. Strivings gave a very impressive New Year's message in which he stressed the importance of Christians taking spiritual inventory as well as financial and physical inventory. From 9:15 to 11 o'clock dart ball and other interesting games were played. Refreshments were served and at 11:30 o'clock a song service was followed by a short but helpful talk by the Rev. Mr. Strivings on "The Night Is Far Spent, The Day Is at Hand." The service closed by singing "A Charge to Keep" and ringing the church bell at 12 p. m. The Rev. Mr. Strivings wished all a happy New Year in which they may have a personal contact with God and a blessed experience with Christ.

SALES EXPANSION

Here is a positive contribution to business recovery, suggested by and for the electrical industry. The Electrical World proposes a two-year plan for the complete electrifi-cation of homes which already have electric service. There are said to be 19,000,000 of them.

The possibilities of such expansion are obviously immense. Power is already flowing into those homes.
 They already have the basis of modern equipment. With them it is mostly a matter of adding one circuit
 after another and one bit of equipment after another. "Complete electrification" is a big phrase, and also an elastic one. There are probably not 100 homes in America
 yet fitted with all the electric facilities for light, work and heat that they could use to advantage if they had them. The possibilities of extension in any home are limited only by the consumer's ability to pay for equipment and current.

Here is clearly a great, fruitful field for the electric equipment industry. Electric equipment lately has been getting the jump on electric power, in new growth. This comes from intelligent production of new and useful electric contrivances at lower prices. With lower service rates, too, the power companies could increase their market almost without limit; and with increase of volume, in this industry especially, lower rates justify themselves and profits rise. Gas Age-Record is urging its industry to follow the same course. It is excellent advice.
 These two fields alone can do much for general recovery.

AFRICAN SAFETY VALVE.

War is largely a matter of ambitious statesmen playing with maps.
 Caesar, Alexander and Napoleon were great players that way. Mussolini seems to be taking a turn at it now. The current international attitude credits him with a sort of right to do this, "because his country got so little out of the World War." But he mustn't mess up the European map. So he turns naturally to Africa. Europe's great territorial grab-bag.

Attention was drawn to his African adventure lately when Italian troops mixed up with Abyssinian troops at Ualul. Never heard of that place? Most folks haven't.
 It is a strip of land on the African east coast, fronting the Indian Ocean.
 Italy claims it is 100 miles on her side of the line, and that the Abyssinian troops there were invaders.

The curious thing about it is that a fine, big, modern map of the region, made by the Italian Geographical Institute which lately hung in the press room of the League of Nations at Geneva, showed Ualul 100 miles inside of Abyssinia. The Italian government has now had that map removed. And wherever the little town may have been in the past, you can safely bet that from now on it is in Italian territory.
 Along with whatever adjacent real estate Mussolini wants to "protect"
 by adding it to Somaliland, which is an Italian "protectorate." Well, maybe that is what Africa's for. It saves Europe. Nobody is going to fight for Abyssinia.

PLENTY OF MONEY.

Will Rogers spent part of Christmas Day at a race track in Pasadena, Cal. It was a fine day, and all the world, more or less, was there, and one and another and celebratory of the sports world. Wrote Will: "It was the old eastern day and the sunshine and the good positive that there is plenty of money to feed and clothe everybody. It's only when that everybody has been taxed to death."

There is a reminder in that just ing comment that the country is far from "broke." There is plenty of money. Just as there is abundance of the other things that people need
 —food, clothing, material for homes,
 and so on. Our troubles as a people have been the troubles of mere stupidity, ignorance, carelessness, greed, selfishness. Distribution has broken down, not resources.

Not enough persons in power and authority and not enough common citizens have grasped the fact that it takes as much intelligence to make use of modern machines and technical efficiency as it does to create
 them in the first place.

BRITISH ARMS PROBE.

England, too, is interested in taking the profit out of war. There is going to be a government commission appointed to investigate the arms trade in Great Britain. This is largely the result of our American inquiry. At first, the more sedate British statesmen, scandalized by the personal nature of many of the Senate committee's revelations, objected to starting anything of the sort for themselves. Public pressure apparently has driven them to it.

This sort of thing is rude, to be sure, as our own munitions people and their friends and associated investors agree. But it is necessary.
 Some reforms cannot be accomplished gently, but only with a club.
 That is, in the first stages. When the public is fully informed regarding existing evils and necessary changes, the reforms go over easily,
 by almost unanimous agreement.

We seem well on the road at last
 to such reform of the arms and munitions industry, eliminating the racketeering from the decent and essential processes.

MENTAL CASE TREATMENT.

A hundred years ago or even less,
 insane asylums were places where
 "crazy" people were locked up in cages like wild beasts. The result was that they generally behaved like that.

The modern psychiatric hospital is a place where people who are mentally (and frequently also physically) ill are studied and treated, and often cured the same as other sick folk.

The object of all the studies and efforts which are now being made is to "do something" for these unfortunates—"to get them well," or at least well enough to return to their homes where they can be cared for by the family physician.

In addition to their mental ailments these people are subject to the same physical diseases as afflict any other group of the population and must be treated as they arise. Not infrequently (perhaps in all cases)
 some physical disorder is the underlying cause of the mental upset.
 These must be sought for and removed as far as possible.

I am quoting Dr. John T. Nerancy of Elgin, Illinois, in an address on "Climples of Modern Psychiatry."
 He says further: "At the Elgin
 State Hospital we have about 4,300 patients all the time. We receive about 200 new cases every month and send home 150. All patients are treated individually and receive such medical treatment as is needed
 besides the treatment for the mental condition in the form of work and recreation. All women, who are fit to receive such attention, are given "beauty shop" treatments frequently in order to maintain or develop their self respect.

You will notice that the underlying idea is that these patients are treated as if they were normal, not "crazy," every physical defect is corrected or helped as much as possible;
 and opportunity for work and play is provided.

This treatment raises their morale,
 or self respect and as they find that their physical needs and physical ailments receive prompt and courteous attention, they are more willing to freely discuss their mental problems with the physicians, and they are thus able to "unwind" the tangled skein. That this treatment is successful is shown by the fact that for every 20 that go in, 15 are able to return to their homes.

CHAPTER 24

DAYS OF PROPER

JERRY sat up and stared at me
 approvingly. "You've done very well, Nick. I don't often pay you compliments, but..."

"Wait a moment," I interjected.
 "You haven't heard the most important part yet."

As briefly as I could I went on to describe our encounter with Mr. Peter Orloff and my staggering discovery with regard to his identity.

"You may think I'm quite mad," I finished, "but I never felt more certain of anything in my life. I'd recognize the brute's voice anywhere.
 He's stillman right enough—now
 can take my word for it—and you perhaps you'll suggest what we're going to do about it."

It was Molly who was the first to speak. "I know what I'm going to do," she said. "I'm going straight to the Cathedral and I'm going to light a candle to Saint Anthony. I prayed to him, specially last night,
 and you see he's beginning to help us already."

"And a jolly useful bit of work,
 too," Jerry turned to me. "Why didn't you tell Avo?"

"I really don't know," I admitted.
 "Partly, I think, because it all happened so suddenly, and partly because he seemed to be under the impression that we were a couple of well-meaning mutts. I don't like being despised—even by a millionaire."

"It gives us a freer hand, anyhow," Jerry observed with a considerable relish. "We know something about the blighter that no one else does except Dunitz." He paused. "I wonder whether he has any idea
 that you spotted him?"

"I don't think so," I said. "I'm not even sure that he noticed me. I slipped into the car directly I heard his voice."

"It's a pity we're not certain if he did, and if what Avo told you about him is right, things look like being a bit tricky. These Russian lads don't stick at much. They've pots of money and a devilish big organization, and if he thought there was the smallest chance of our giving him away to the police, I rather fancy that Mr. Peter Orloff might be inclined to turn nasty."

"He wouldn't have far to turn,"
 I observed.

"It's Molly I'm thinking about. As far as you and I..."

"Look here!" Molly straightened herself indignantly. "You've just got to drop that nonsense or the whole thing's off. I'm not standing for any of the sweet sheltered girl business.
 We're all in this together, and if there's going to be trouble I'm ready to take my share of it."

"You mustn't be angry with him,"
 I said. "It's natural for a baronet to be a bit old-fashioned."
 "Sorry!" Jerry made her an apologetic bow. "Your fault, you know, for being so beautiful. If anyone went and stuck a knife into you it would sour the whole of my future life."

MOLLY laughed. "I should be annoyed, too." She leaned across to the writing-table and helped herself to a cigarette. "What's your idea?" she demanded. "I can see you've got some scheme or you wouldn't be worrying about me."

"It's more than a scheme," returned Jerry. "It's an absolute brain wave. We want to find out all we possibly can about Osborne, and as Nick says, the first chap we've got to see is this farmer at Hambridge.
 Now you can bet your boots that Orloff doesn't mean to let us out of his sight. He'll have someone shadowing us all the time, and if we try to go down there by road or train
 we shall simply be giving away the whole show."

"That's true enough," I admitted.

"Still..."

"Half a second!" He shot out
 a long arm and caught me by the
 sleeve. "Why shouldn't we go round
 in the Seagull? She's lying down at Leigh, and it's only a question of
 running over her gear and shoving
 a few stores on board. I could have her ready for sea inside twenty-four hours."

I slipped my knee with a resounding bang. "By Jove, you're bit it!"
 I exclaimed.

"What's the Seagull?" inquired
 Molly.

"The true enough," I admitted.

"Still..."

"Half a second!" He shot out
 a long arm and caught me by the
 sleeve. "Why shouldn't we go round
 in the Seagull? She's lying down at Leigh, and it's only a question of
 running over her gear and shoving
 a few stores on board. I could have

 hours."

I slipped my knee with a resounding bang. "By Jove, you're bit it!"
 I exclaimed.

"What's the Seagull?" inquired
 Molly.

"The true enough," I admitted.

"Still..."

"Half a second!" He shot out
 a long arm and caught me by the
 sleeve. "Why shouldn't we go round
 in the Seagull? She's lying down at Leigh, and it's only a question of
 running over her gear and shoving
 a few stores on board. I could have
 her ready for sea inside twenty-four hours."

"She's an old tin belonging to Jerry," I explained. "A little eight-ton cutter just big enough for three of us."

"You see the notion?" resumed her owner with enthusiasm. "If we go round by water we shall have them completely dumfounded. Besides, it will settle all the difficulty of keeping you out of danger. If they don't know where you are they can't very well cut your throat."

"Would you mind roughing it a bit, Molly?" I asked. "It won't be as comfortable as the Mauretania, you know."

"Don't be stupid, Nick," she returned. "What I care about comfort? Why, I'd go anywhere in the world with you two."

"I suppose you know this creek or whatever it is, Jerry?" I said.
 "Judging by Avo's description it sounds a pretty awkward place to get at."

"Oh, I know it right enough. I've been in there twice. It's a sort of shallow estuary, half way on the coast between Shoeburyness and the Crouch. No one puts in there as a rule because there's nothing to go for. Apart from that, there's a boat of a sand bar right across the entrance that you can only get over at high water. The first time I was there I stuck on it for eight hours and nearly drowned myself."

"Well, now you've had a rehearsal," I observed. "I hope you'll be less clumsy."

"When can we start?" inquired Molly. "I'd like to get away as soon as we can."

"It's no use until the keys turn up," I pointed out. "Avo will probably send them along tonight;
 he's got my address."

"I'll run down tomorrow anyway,"
 said Jerry. "She'll want a certain amount of overhauling, so as likely as not I'll sleep on board, and come back and fetch you in the car next morning."

He jumped up, his face all alight
 at the prospect of getting back to his beloved hobby. "We must have a drink on the strength of this," he continued. "I don't know whether Molly..."

He stopped abruptly in the middle of the sentence, and looking up, I saw him standing tense and motionless staring over our heads in the direction of the screen.

"What on earth..." I began.

"Sh!"

With the swiftness and silence of a panther he glided forward across the room, Molly and I sprang to our feet, and the next moment, to my utter amazement, a struggling and protesting figure was being hauled in unceremoniously through the open door. Dumbfounded as I was,
 I recognized the man instantly. It was the waiter from downstairs who had brought us our whisky.

"What do you think you're doing?"

Jerry thrust his captive back against the wardrobe, and stood regarding him with baleful eyes.
 The fellow put up a shaking hand
 to his throat.

"I do not understand. I was doing nothing..."

"Don't lie to me. You were sneaking about outside, trying to listen to what we were saying."

The other made an obvious effort to pull himself together. "You have no right to say that," he stammered.
 "It is not true."

"Yes it is," retorted Jerry viciously. "And what's more, you had the cheek to open the door." He advanced a step nearer. "I don't know who you are or where you come from, but I've a precious good mind to smash your face in."

It was at this point that I ventured to interrupt. "Steady on for a moment," I suggested. "Let's hear what he's got to say."

"It is all a mistake, sir. Our victor turned to me with a kind of tremulous eagerness. 'When I got downstairs just now I find that I have lost a ten-shilling note. I say to myself perhaps I have dropped it in the passage. I came up here again to see if I could find it.'"

"How about the door?" I inquired.
 "Did that open itself?"

He made a gesture with his hands. "I suppose I did not shut it properly when I went out. I thought it was closed—yes—but perhaps I was mistaken."

"Perhaps you were," I said politely.

"What's your name?" demanded
 Jerry.

The man, who was evidently hesitating to recover his nerve, turned to him half defiantly.

"Kilner," he replied. "Jacob Kilner."

Message

Washington, Jan. 3.—The studious backstage preparation of the presidential message to Congress furnishes a good insight of how President Roosevelt works.

Two months ago, his top advisers began thinking about what he should say. They wrote out suggested paragraphs and catch-phrases
 and proposed methods of approach for various subjects. The invisible Prof. Raymond Moley is supposed to have had a large hand in this work. He writes much better than the heavy-penned cabinet officers,
 and comes closer to giving Mr.
 Roosevelt what he wants. In fact,
 he is considered the No. 1 man for speeches.

Six weeks ago, the President started hashing and rehashing suggested drafts. Before he left for his Thanksgiving vacation he had worked up several, covering half a dozen subjects in a few paragraphs each. Many of these had to be discarded when he came back and found that many of the economies
 he had planned for the budget were impossible. A week ago, he knew just about what he was going to say on each subject and had a tentative disjointed manuscript before him.
 He read to his experts in various lines and brief portions of it relating only to their subjects and asked their judgment.

But, up to last Wednesday, he had not yet picked his message together. While some of the experts knew what he intended to say on their particular subjects, no one had read the whole message.

What you finally are getting is not exactly what it appears to be,
 a personal message from Mr. Roosevelt to Congress. It is the laborious product of possibly two minds,
 gathered together by one—a state paper report from the New Deal to the people.

Budget

There was also a well studied and typically Rooseveltian method in the timing of the message.

In the first place, Mr. Roosevelt announced he would hold back copies from newsmen until a few hours before he went to the Capitol.
 There appears to have been more of a purpose in that than merely to prevent leaks. For one thing, it whetted interest, heightened expectancy, placed more stress on the message—and less stress on the budget.

It has been customary for new-men to receive advance copies of both the regular message and the budget about the same time, a few days before delivery. Publication of the budget is ordinarily delayed until the day after the regular message, so that the two will not compete for publicity.

This time, Mr. Roosevelt delayed the budget for three days after the regular message. That will permit the good news of the message to sink in thoroughly before the comparatively bad news of the budget gets out.

The White House knows its publicity.

Tax Snooping

The Internal Revenue Bureau is on the warpath. It has quietly sent out "thousands" of notices to small taxpayers demanding that they come in with books and records to prove their deductions in their 1932 income tax returns.

In previous administrations, the bureau did not fool with the little fellow

Hitler Rally Causes Avalanche of Rumors

Berlin, Jan. 4 (AP)—Reichsfuehrer Hitler's mysterious meeting with Nazi leaders created the paradox today of unleashing an avalanche of rumors the rally was designed to forestall.

Berlin was taken by surprise by the suddenness of the gathering yesterday at the State Opera House, to which even Nazi newspapermen were refused admittance. As a result among rumors circulated today, all of them denied in official circles, were:

That 20,000 members of the Nazi party have been eliminated;

That Hitler feared consequences of jealousy between the Reichswehr, or regular army, and the Schutz Staffeln (picked Nazi guards);

That some action was planned if there is too long a delay in returning the Saar to Germany after the expected favorable vote in the January 13 plebiscite.

That the Reich may make an abrupt about-face in foreign policy by demanding actual equality in armaments and a return of the long-mourning colonies.

Even observers accustomed to Hitler's tactics were surprised at the unexpectedness of the meeting, which brought cabinet members, Nazi and military heads and secret police chiefs to the Opera House, 3,000 strong.

Officially the meeting was described as a demonstration of Nazi solidarity.

Christian Science Exhibit
New York, Dec. 31—An unusual display will take place in the new Rockefeller Center from Jan. 4 to 12. The central feature of this exhibit will be the Bible and Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, by Mary Baker Eddy, discoverer and founder of Christian Science. These two books are ordained by Mrs. Eddy in the Manual of The Mother Church as Pastor over The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., and are used by all churches of this denomination throughout the world. The Oxford University Press is lending to this exhibit a collection of rare Bibles, including the famous "Vinegar" Bible of 1716 and the miniature Bible 1 1/2 x 3/4 inches. The turnings are being supplied through the courtesy of B. Altman & Co.

CHOICE CANAPES

WHEN the wintry winds blow cold one likes a snappy nibble to start the meal. Here are a few suggestions which may be helpful:

Canape Morn.
Prepare rounds of toasted bread cut one-fourth inch in thickness or slightly thicker. Spread a teaspoonful of caviar on each. Sprinkle with salt and pepper finely chopped over the caviar and serve with a curl of tender lettuce.

Canape Souverain.
Prepare rounds of toasted bread, spread lightly with butter, then add one teaspoonful of caviar on each; spread evenly. Chop the white of hard-boiled egg, sprinkle this over, then on top arrange an anchovy in vine shape and fill the inside of the ring with a little chopped parsley. Serve with a bit of lemon and parsley for garnish.

Canape With Artichokes.
Cook the artichokes and remove all leaves and fuzzy centers, leaving the heart. Place this on lightly buttered toast rounds, which have been spread with anchovy paste. Garnish with pickled cucumbers, capers or gherkins and hard-boiled eggs finely chopped. Dot with mayonnaise and sprinkle with paprika.

Pepper Canapes.
Cut rounds of bread one-third inch thick and brown in butter in a hot frying pan. Mix together two tablespoonfuls each of chopped, hard-boiled eggs and pimiento, one-half teaspoonful each of salt and mustard, two tablespoonfuls of grated cheese, the same of melted butter, one-fourth teaspoonful of celery salt, one-half teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Spread on the rounds of bread and toast under a broiler for a few minutes until brown.

There are many varieties of canapes that may be made, using tuna, salmon, lobster, smoked fish. Add chopped sour pickle and decorate with a slice of stuffed olive or a whole ripe olive.

British Possessions.
The British possessions in the West Indies include the Bermudas, the Bahamas, Jamaica with the Turks and Caicos and Cayman Islands, Trinidad and Tobago, Barbados; the Leeward Islands of Antigua, St. Kitts-Nevis, Dominica, Montserrat and British Guiana; the Windward Islands with Grenada and the Grenadines, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, and British Honduras. The total area of the lands in this archipelago, situated between North and South America, with Central America and the Yucatan province of Mexico is about 12,227 square miles.

Monument Honoring Tecumseh.
Chatham, Mich., has a monument dedicated to Tecumseh, the noted Ohio Indian warrior who played a leading part in battles in that territory.

BARBARA BELL FASHION PATTERNS

Pattern No. 1556-B

Spring Frock in Print

This charming little dress makes a perfect choice for the gay cottons, and the colorful silks that are to herald in the fashions of spring. The season is to be one of prints. And nothing looks more captivating than the dress that gets some place without much cutting. Notice how few seam-lines there are in this model. Above a penitentiary shirt we have plain smooth shoulders, short sleeves, a high neck-line and fascinating lacing in the front. These brief details represent the sum total of chic found in the advanced showings of practical daytime dresses for spring.

Prints in every kind of fabric are in the fare. Cottons include smart, dainty, with summer. Sewer designs of the more sophisticated school of multi-colors. Yarns are woven with openwork interruptions which make effective backgrounds for sketchy foliage, and floral prints.

Our pattern for this dress is so simple an amateur can accomplish wonders with it. Try making a silk, or cotton print for spring. A couple of hours of time, and a few yards of material is a low price for a dress that looks as expensive as this one.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1556-B is designed in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 (34) requires about 3 1/2 yards of 36 inch material.

Tomorrow: Little French frock with panties.

MENU FOR TODAY

Menu for Saturday, January 5:
Breakfast: Orange Juice, Dry Cereal with cream, shirred eggs with cheese, popovers, coffee. Luncheon: Tomato chowder, crackers, Washington pie, tea. Dinner: Tomato soup, baked beef loaf, brown gravy, Lyonnaise potatoes, mashed turnip, apple fritters, lemon sauce, baked Indian pudding, coffee.

Shirred Eggs with Cheese.
Brush glass or earthen shirring dish with butter; carefully break the eggs, so that the yolk does not break; sprinkle with salt and pepper to taste and 1 tablespoon grated cheese to each egg. Place in hot oven until the egg is firm as desired and the cheese melted.

Washington Pie.
Separate 2 eggs, yolks and whites beaten separately; cream 1 cup sugar, 1/2 cup butter creamed, 1/2 cup milk, 2 cups flour sifted with 1/2 teaspoon soda and 1 teaspoon cream of tartar. Bake in two pie tins. When done, turn out and cool. Put whipped cream between and on top, flavored with vanilla. Peaches, sliced, are nice with whipped cream on top of pie.

Apple Fritters.
Two cups of prepared pancake flour and 2 tart apples chopped very fine. Mix them stiff with cold water. Drop by tablespoons into deep hot fat, and when they are brown drain on paper. Serve with sauce.

Origin of 6th Industry
The alluvium mentioned in Japanese mythology, but its historical record began in 180 A. D. when a Chinese, named Koma-O, went to Japan taking alluvium eggs with him. Ninety years later, several Chinese experts in agriculture went to Japan, and from that time the industry flourished.

Power Projects Called Wasteful

Nothing approaching economic justification can be found for the government public work projects on the St. Lawrence and in the Western river basins, according to Elton H. Hooker, speaking as a hydraulic engineer, chairman of the Research Corporation and president of the Hooker Electrochemical Corporation, before more than 200 members of the New York State Chamber of Commerce, whom he addressed at their meeting yesterday in New York city.

"There appears to be 400,000 developed but unused horsepower free at the present time on the Canadian side of the St. Lawrence, which it will take many years to dispose of," Mr. Hooker said. "There is also another 5,000,000 horsepower loose in New York, ready to be used, with no present market. Yet the government proposes to develop 500,000 additional excess horsepower on the St. Lawrence."

"There is a curious psychology about this enterprise. When you criticize the worthlessness of the power project, its proponents soft pedal that and call attention to the overwhelming advantages of the St. Lawrence seaway, of which power is only a by-product. When one questions the economic value of the St. Lawrence seaway, they point out how necessary it is to develop St. Lawrence power to protect New England and New York from the power octopi and the gangsters."

Seen As No Aid in Relief.
"Further, the fatal defect in all these government plans for power dams, so far as emergency relief is concerned, is that it will take five years to complete the projects and five years more to purchase transformer lines and the apparatus to use, and we can not wait ten years for relief."

Stone Dog That Howled
The Dog river is a short distance from Beirut, Syria. The name is derived from the great stone dog, or perhaps Assyrian bull, that once stood on the height overlooking the mouth of the river and the sea. The dog's head was hollow and when the wind blew from a certain direction the dog used to emit howls, to the terror of the surrounding population. The most valiant of these at length summoned up enough courage to push the gigantic dog over the edge of the cliff into the sea, where it is visible at low tide.

Netburn Discharged From Bankruptcy

New York, Jan. 3 (Special).—An order discharging Joseph Netburn, operator of a 5 and 10 cent store at 542 Broadway, Kingston, from bankruptcy, was signed in Federal Court by Judge Francis G. Caffey. The discharge was ordered when no opposition was offered on the part of creditors.

Mt. Netburn filed a pauper's petition in bankruptcy here in Federal Court on September 4. The schedule at that time listed liabilities of $21,438 and assets of $750. Chief among the creditors listed were the Rondout Savings Bank which held $14,000 in claims secured by mortgage, and the Kingston Trust Co., $1,400.

Twaalfskill Hose Co. Elects Officers

The annual meeting of Twaalfskill Hose Co., No. 5, was held January 3. The following officers were elected for the year: Edward Ryan, president; Lawrence Conlin, foreman; John Stewart, first assistant foreman; John Conlin, second assistant foreman; Henry Higgins, recording secretary; John Flannery, financial secretary; George Schick, treasurer; Frederick Stoudt, delegate to Hudson Valley Volunteer Firemen's Association; George Schick, delegate to City Fire Fund Association; William Hecht, George Quigley and Frederick Zoller, trustees; William Ryan, janitor. A committee was appointed to arrange for a dance to be held January 23. The company, after extending a vote of thanks to W. N. Conner for a box of cigars he presented, adjourned.

Where the Wife Takes Half
In Scotland an innocent wife who divorces her husband is legally in the same position as a widow in Scotland, as she is entitled to claim one-half of her husband's personal estate. CAPITAL NEWS

HOLLISTER STURGES, Jr.

Albany, Jan. 4 (Special).—Unlike opening sessions of the past, this first week of the legislature has begun with unusual speed. The aim of a short session is certain to be accomplished if any judgment can be reached by the swift activities in the Senate chamber yesterday. A large series of bills having been introduced, committees were prepared to report on measures as presented by the governor in his message to the joint session held on Tuesday. A "Legislative Day" was held this morning by the senators so that their path may be cleared for next Monday and subsequent readings of their initial bills.

Assemblymen introduced a score of bills yesterday. Among them one to legalize pari-mutual horse race betting as a means of governmental revenue, limiting state employees to forty-eight hours' work per week, and one for providing entire cost of sanding and removing snow from highways and erection of snow fences to be borne by the state. A general exodus from the capital yesterday afternoon marked the end of this session's first week. Significant change of desertion from the Republican Old Guard leadership to a younger head has proven to be the outstanding political event of the state for many years.

FLASHES OF LIFE SKETCHED IN BRIEF

By Associated Press

He'll Save Him
Columbus, O.—Fetus Stephens, 16, is glad he wears a belt, not suspenders.

Stephens happened to drive past a store just as Detective George Donaldson fired a shot at a man he was pursuing in connection with a robbery. Donaldson's aim was a little less than perfect and the bullet went through the door of Stephens' automobile. The bullet hit Stephens' belt and then dropped into his pocket. Both Stephens and the detective were happy about the belt.

That's Different.
Pittsburgh—The buzzer sounded on call box 531 at the fire station. Hoseman John Hilt glanced over casually and remarked to a visitor: "That's a call our station doesn't answer."

Then the phone rang.
"Gooh, it's my house," shouted Hoseman Hilt as he dashed out, boots and all.

Are You There?
Franklin, W. Va.—Now the people in Franklin can talk to the folks somewhere else.

Heretofore one of the most isolated municipalities in West Virginia, this mountain town at last has long distance telephone service.

All Fine
Philadelphia—It was a fine trade-in offer that Magistrate Jacob Dogole made to Charles F. Holman, jobless motorist of Sellersville, for Holman's 1927 model automobile.

"Get that piece of junk off the street and I'll refund your $5 fine," said the magistrate. Holman agreed and the $5 was refunded.

Mum Have Been Sleepy
Portland, Ore.—Shuddering after a yawn which lasted three hours, Clarence Potampa of Klamath Falls said:
"My mouth stays shut hereafter."

The P. T. A. of the North Flatbush School held its business meeting Friday, December 21, after listening to a delightful program given by the school. The next meeting will be held January 18 in the evening when Mrs. Ryder and Mrs. Ducker will have charge of the program on "Parent Education and a discussion on 'Teasing'." All parents are urged to be present.

THESE four members of the Russian judiciary, perched on a bench, are conducting court during the "party cleaning." This is an investigation to check up on the farm leaders of the U. S. S. R. who have not conducted themselves as true Communists in their work and general behavior. The defendant is the man standing.

Ol' Dobbin Is Still in Demand

Ithaca, N. Y., Jan. 4—Despite coys, wheels, pulleys, and other evidences of the machine age, the demand for Ol' Dobbin remains steady, says Professor M. W. Harper of the New York state college of agriculture.

In the spring of 1934, 20,000 work horses were in demand on New York farms. The demand promises to be greater, and the supply less next spring.

New York farmers now have about 300,000 horses. Since the average working life of a horse is about 15 years, about 20,000 horses will pass the age of usefulness within one year and a like number will be needed as replacements. To meet this demand, less than 5,000 home-bred colts are coming into working age, and farmers in the Empire state must look to other states to buy about 15,000 horses.

The United States has about 17,000,000 horses and mules, Professor Harper says. Replacements call for more than 1,000,000 colts of working age, but only one-half of this number can be had.

Because of the small supply, prices are high and will be still higher before enough horses can be raised to meet the constant demand, Professor Harper says. He suggests that some New York farmers can raise horses needed for replacements.

REVIVAL STARTED AT ST. MARK'S A. M. E. CHURCH

Last Monday evening the religious campaign commenced at St. Mark's A. M. E. Church on Foxhall avenue, the Rev. M. J. Broome, pastor. The evangelist, the Rev. L. Walter Shields, of Syracuse, and known in the south as "The Black Billy Sunday." The services are being well attended each evening to hear the sermons delivered by this Gospel preacher. The meeting will continue indefinitely. Preaching all day Sunday. A special message will be delivered at 3 p. m. to the women and girls of this city. A cordial invitation to all pastors and congregations to attend.

If the motto of all business were "Safety First," there wouldn't be any business.

Free Trees for 4-H Boys, Girls

Ithaca, N. Y., Jan. 4—New York state boys and girls, members of 4-H clubs, may each receive one thousand and free to plant on idle farm acres, says J. E. Davis of the state college of agriculture. These trees are available only to those boys and girls who have not received free trees before. They are given by the state conservation department.

Mr. Davis says the thousand trees will plant about one acre of ground. They are from six inches to a foot tall, so planting them is not a very hard job. Actual planting work is said to take only from 10 to 12 hours.

Pine, cedar, spruce, or black locust trees may be selected, he adds. One thousand trees of any one kind, or five hundred each of two kinds may be chosen. Mr. Davis says that pine is best for lumber, spruce for Christmas trees, poplar, or lumb, and white cedar and black locust for fence posts.

To get these trees, send an enrollment card, filled in for a tree planting project, to the county club leader. He will send a special 4-H free tree order blank. This should be filled in carefully, signed, and sent back to the county 4-H club office or farm bureau office not later than the second week in February, Mr. Davis says. Trees will be sent next April.

Couvade
Couvade is the name given by anthropologists to the custom prevalent among some primitive races, by which the father of a newly born infant makes a pretense of going through the same experience as the mother and lies up for a time, abstains from certain foods etc. as though he, too, were physically affected by the birth. The custom has been observed by travelers in Guinea and other parts of South America, among some Afghan tribes, in parts of China, Borneo, etc. It was noted by the ancients as occurring in Corsica and among the Celtiberians. Couvade is from the French, couvrir, to hatch.

Here is Walter P. Chrysler's Answer to America's Traffic Problem... See it Tomorrow

TOMORROW, PLYMOUTH ANNOUNCES a new kind of automobile. A revolutionary new high-speed safety car, engineered from the ground up, to meet the nation's modern traffic conditions.

Built under the personal supervision of Walter P. Chrysler, it satisfies today's critical need for safe transportation on our congested highways and pedestrian-crowded city streets.

We're traveling faster today. Turnpikes seem with impatient traffic.

You need speed. But speed alone is not

And they solved it by building this new high-speed safety car.

You've never before... in all your life... driven a car like this. It "glides" over the bumps and ruts in the road.

This new "Floating Ride" is made possible by new weight distribution... the development of a sway eliminator... and the use of new Mola Steel front springs.

Technically, you ride at a lower "vibration rate." Actually, that means you don't bounce around the way you used to.

A New Motoring Experience

We can't describe it... you've got to experience it... the thrill you get when you step on the accelerator of this wonderful new Plymouth.

Apply Hollywood Methods to Birds

Ithaca, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Professor A. A. Allen of the department of ornithology at Cornell leads an expedition this spring in a search of the last haunts of rare North American birds to preserve for future generations their habits and calls instead of their stuffed skins.

A. R. Brand, who has sponsored all the bird-song recording at Cornell, finances the expedition. Paul Kellogg, instructor in ornithology and an expert in sound recording, and Dr. George M. Sutton, bird artist and curator of birds in the Cornell University museum, comprise the rest of the party which starts the last of February in two trucks for the south and west.

The trucks will be equipped with many types of cameras and blinds, and modern sound-recording equipment. As soon as the secret haunts of these rare birds are discovered, the bird characteristics can be recorded on films and their voices, as well as their actions and appearances, preserved for posterity.

In the past, Dr. Allen says, no one has attempted to make permanent records of the living habits of rare creatures. All efforts were made to collect and preserve their bodies as museum specimens. Now, all this will be changed.

The Cornell expedition hopes to bring back living studies of the ivory-billed woodpecker, the sandhill crane, the limpkin or crying bird, the trumpeter swan, the lesser prairie chicken, the golden eagle, and perhaps the whooping crane, rarest of all North American birds and also the largest.

At The Theatres

Broadway: "The Hilton Sisters" and "Home on the Range". Stage entertainment returns to the Broadway after a long absence in the presence of the Hilton Sisters and a troupe of 15 entertainers. The Hilton Sisters, known to the world as the American Siamese Twins, are a talented pair with remarkable ability in the realm of entertainment. Supporting them is a group of added artists who bring novelty and comedy to a well diversified program.

"Home on the Range" is the talkie presentation, a lively western drama from the pen of Zane Grey. Randolph Scott, Evelyn Brent and Jackie Cooper headline the cast.

Orpheum: "Million Dollar Ransom" and "Smoking Guns". Another double feature is being offered at the Orpheum, the first a Damon Runyon story with Mary Carlisle and Phillips Holmes. It concerns the effort of a liquor baron to tread the straight and narrow. Edward Arnold gives a marvelous performance in this role.

"Smoking Guns" is Ken Maynard's latest western thriller, a show bristling with action, revenge and justice.

Kingston: "Here is my Heart". Alive with Crosby singing, comedy moments with Roland Young, and a plot that moves interestingly and romantically through a maze of eventful circumstances, this latest release by Paramount starring Bing Crosby is as good as his previous pictures, and the help of the talented Kitty Carlisle, Alison Shipworth and Reginald Owen adds immeasurably to the play's success. It's all about a princess, and a wealthy young singer who masquerades as a waiter, with the usual misadventures and excitement. During all this, Mr. Crosby has plenty of chance to go vocal and he sings numerous songs in his customary enjoyable fashion. The talkie is taut, humorous entertainment, good for an evening of enjoyment.

Tomorrow.
Broadway: Same.
Orpheum: Same.
Kingston: "Imitation of Life". A vivid, moving drama that presents a strong and intelligently done social picture of today is this story of two mothers, one white and one black, and their sorrows, joys and feelings more hand in hand across the screen with great force and understanding. The direction is almost flawless and the acting of a group of carefully picked artists is excellent. The direction was by John Stahl and the principal players include Claudette Colbert, Louise Beavers, Warren William and Ned Sparks.

New Year Thoughts

Let us walk softly, friend;
For strange paths lie before us, all
untrod;
The new year, spotless from the hand
of God,
Is thine, and mine, O friend!

Let us walk strangely, friend;
Forget the crooked paths behind us
now,
Press on with steeper purpose on your brow,
To better deeds, O friend!

Let us walk quickly, friend;
Work with our might while lasts our little stay,
And help some halting comrade on the way;
And may God guide us, friend!

Full of enthusiasm, she had gone in for politics and was out of the house most of the day. The other night she returned at 9 o'clock and sank into a comfortable armchair.
She—Everything's just grand.
We're going to sweep the country.
Husband (looking around wearily)
Why not start with the dining room?

The price level is rising. So how can it be on the level?

Farmer—And how's Lawyer Jones
doing, Doctor?
Doctor—Poor fellow, he's lying at death's door.

Farmer—That's grit for you, at death's door and still lying.

When your troubles weigh you down, invest in a new set of thinking scales.

Friend—How's your business?
Business man—Huh! I'm just on my way to the drug store now to get some chloride of lime to sprinkle on it.

Laws are much like cobwebs which catch many small flies, but let the wasps and hornets break through.

Mrs. Jones could only find two aisle seats—one behind the other.
Wishing to have her sister beside her, she turned and cautiously surveyed the man in the next seat.
Finally she leaped over and timidly addressed the man:

Mrs. Jones—I beg your pardon,
sir, but are you alone?

The man without turning his head in the slightest, but twisting his mouth to an alarming degree and shielding it with his hand, muttered:
Man—Cut it out, kid—cut it out!
My wife's with me!

Most people ignore advice until it is too late for advice to do them any good.

others, unless we give up all things sold ready-to-wear. Go out, for example, and try to buy some string ties.

Man—Are you afraid of the germs
they claim are so thick on our paper money?

Friend—Not a bit. My money goes out so fast no germ could be quick enough to get from it to me while it's in my possession.

What a saving it would mean if we could only throw father in the cellar when he gets good and hot under the collar and let him heat the house.

HEATING HINTS

By John Barclay

ALTHOUGH banking the fire is a very simple operation, many people have trouble with it. Let me explain the method that I have found the most satisfactory.

First (and only if it is necessary to make room for fresh coal), gently shake the fire until you see
the first red glow in the ashpit.
Then with a shovel or hoe pull the live coals toward the front of the furnace, so that the fire bed slopes downward towards the back. Shovel the fresh coal carefully into the bellow thus formed. And, as in refueling, be sure to leave an exposed spot of live coals right in front of the fire door. This "hot spot" will act as a pilot light to ignite the gases given off by the fresh coal, preventing them from escaping into the house.

When banking the fire for the night, the Ashpit Tamper should be closed and the Check Tamper open. The Turn Tamper should be left as nearly closed as possible.
And remember, it should never be necessary to leave the fire door open when the fire is banked. If you follow this procedure, your fire will stay in for the night and will deliver ample heat when you open the drafts in the morning. (4)

GAS BUGGIES—Life's Little Lessons.

I did not kill Osborne

By VICTOR BRIDGES

SYNOPSIS: Nicholas French
has learned a good deal about the mysterious disappearance of a certain person belonging to Molly O'Brien, from Sir William Acon.
Nick, with Jerry Mordant and Molly, plans to visit a deserted factory where John Osborne, who first stole the formula, manufactured a piece of the metal it describes. They will go on Jerry's little outing. While they are discussing the matter Jerry catches sight of a waiter lurking about the door, and accuses him of spying.

Chapter 25
JIMMY FOX

"WHY should I answer your questions?" the waiter demanded.
"I have done nothing wrong. It is you who have struck and assaulted me. If you do not let me go at once,
I shall speak to the manager."

"You'll speak to the manager, all right," said Jerry. "I'll see to that."
He pointed to the door. "Get out,"
he rasped. "Get out quick, before I break your neck!"

For a rash instant Kliner seemed inclined to continue the discussion.
His lips opened, and then, just as he was about to speak, something in Jerry's face apparently checked the impulse, and with a furtive glance
at all three of us, he sidled hastily from the room.

"Get out before I break your neck," said Jerry

I strolled after him and looked the door.

"Quite an exciting little episode!"
I observed as I came back. "Just shows how careful one ought to be."

Jerry shook his head. "Aren't you right," he growled. "We are mutes,
and we deserve to be kicked—all the lot of us."

"What do you mean?" asked Molly. "Do you think he's one of Osborne's people?"

"Not a doubt of it. An ordinary hotel waiter would never have the nerve to do a thing of that sort." He took a couple of paces towards the window, and then wheeled round.
"Some Russian who's probably posing as a refugee. The whole of Europe stinks with them."

"I wish we knew how much he'd overheard," I remarked regretfully.
"If he was listening the whole time..."

"I don't think he was," broke in Jerry. "I believe he went off for a bit and then sneaked back. Anyhow, I saw the door move; that's what attracted my attention."

"Well, whatever the damage is,
it's done now," I pointed out.
"Seems to me our best plan is to keep quiet. Molly's going to be here for another couple of days, and if we complain to the manager it will probably get all round the hotel. We don't want to have everybody talking and gossiping about her."

"There's something in that," admitted Jerry. "All the same, I'd like to know who this stink is, and where they got him from."

"I can probably find out," I said
with a sudden inspiration. "You remember that kid I spoke to on my way up?"

He nodded.
"He's a sort of janitor of mine used to attend a drawing-class in Walter's. I've promised to look over some work of his when I go down, and I'll ask him if he can ferret out anything about our girl's record."

"Right you are," said Jerry. "You get ahead with it, Molly, and you can go back to the flat, and you can join us there. Then we'll take George for a walk and have tea in the Park."

"I don't think I shall ever want to eat again," protested Molly. "You gave me such a huge lunch."

"You must have tea," said Jerry firmly. "I've booked a table at Ciro's tonight, and one can't dance on an empty tummy."

We waited for a minute while Molly powdered her nose and put on a hat, and then, making our way to the end of the corridor, walked down the broad deserted staircase.

As we arrived at the bottom I saw Jimmy on the opposite side of the lounge. I gave him an encouraging nod, and leaving the others to make their exit, walked over to an unattended corner.

HE HAD evidently thought out his preparations, for, disappearing promptly through an adjoining doorway, he emerged a moment later carrying a neatly tied brown paper parcel.

"These are them, sir," he whispered, coming across to where I was waiting. "They ain't up to much
—just a few bits I done at odd times.
It won't be 'at kind if you'll 'ave a look through them."

The Street Singer

Among a number of persons who Thursday called The Freeman office asking the names of the two police officers who were disciplined by the Board of Police Commissioners
Wednesday night were several police officers, who requested that the names be published as a protection to them, some having been accused of being disciplined. The names will not be published by The Freeman,
because the only official information released was the vague statement of Police Chief Wood. The police board is one of the few boards which refuse to allow reporters in attendance, and consequently information must be taken as it is given or The Freeman must guess as to what happened. A request that reporters be allowed to attend the meetings has been refused by the board, and it is likely that whatever action was taken will never be known officially.

Ann Harding Faces California Battle

Reno, Nevada, Jan. 4.—While Ann Harding enjoyed the exclusive custody of her six-year old daughter today a Los Angeles attorney prepared
what he termed "sensational evidence" in an effort to take little Jane away from her mother.
Scarcely had District Judge Thomas F. Moran granted the film actress continual care of the girl yesterday than Bryon Hanna announced in Los Angeles that Harry Bannister would begin action in California courts to place his daughter "in better hands."
Bannister, now in New York, did not contest yesterday's secret hearing.

Chameleons
Most species of chameleon live in Africa, but in this country the name is also given to a small lizard of another family, which like the true chameleon, changes its color with great facility. The American type is very active in pursuit of its food, while the African chameleon is sluggish and depends on its long projectile tongue to capture insects. Chameleons are said to be difficult to keep in captivity, living only a few months.

Benedictine Sisters Extend Gratitude

The sisters of the Benedictine Hospital wish to express their thanks and appreciation to all who helped make the Christmas season so cheerful for the patients at the hospital.
To members of the Ladies' and Junior Auxiliaries for the interest and time spent in decorating the many trees in the corridors and wards, also for making the reception room so attractive and home-like; to the merchants for the generosity in donating trees, wreaths and greens and to the various groups who visited the hospital and spread so much cheer and happiness by singing the old but ever new Christmas carols.

ERB Busy With New Storm Water Sewers

The Emergency Relief Bureau has a force of men at work constructing a new storm water sewer in O'Neil street. This will connect with the new sewer to be constructed in Ten Broeck avenue, from O'Neil street to Albany avenue. Another new sewer will be constructed on Downs street
as far north as Brown avenue, and another up Elmendorf street from Ten Broeck avenue to Bruyn avenue.
It is also planned to shortly start constructing a new sanitary sewer in Henry street.

The work in getting the new quarters ready in the former Palen plant on Broadway is proceeding and the bureau expects that it will be ready for occupancy about January 14.

The ERB is extending its thanks to everyone in the city who aided in making the Christmas for needy children such a success. About 1,400 Christmas packages containing toys, fruit and candy were distributed to children in the city who might otherwise have been overlooked by Santa Claus when he visited the city on Christmas Eve.

Lindbergh Says Voice Was Hauptmann's

on two occasions, after which or between which, you went out with your rifle. Now will you tell us about the condition of the room with reference to whether or not there were any footprints of any kind at all in the room?"

Lindbergh answered:
"There were prints on the suitcase or on top of the suitcase which was under the window on the south-east side of the nursery. There was also at least one print on the floor beneath that window and inside of the suitcase which was of a small check and there was also according to my best recollection a print on the window-sill itself."

Continuing the examination:
Q. What do you mean by a print, colonel?

A. A deposit of yellow clay. I will call it.
Q. A sort of mud?
A. Well, mud carries more of the distinction of blackness to me; it was a yellowish, red clay, such as outside of the house beneath that window.

Q. I see.
A. The length and approximately the breadth of a man's foot. The prints were not as distinct as to be able to see the complete outline of a foot. But they were very definitely made by a man's foot.

Q. So that, as I understand it then, there were these—we will call them prints from the window sill in the direction of the crib, towards the crib.

A. There was at least one between the window sill and the crib, in addition to the others.

Q. When you talk about the chest, I show you exhibit 8-11 and ask you whether or not the chest which appears on that exhibit right immediately adjoining the window is the chest that you refer to?

A. It is.

"Jafale" mentioned.
The name of Dr. John F. Condon, the Jafale of the ransom negotiations, was mentioned in testimony for the first time when Wilentz produced additional ransom notes.

"Eventually did you meet Dr. Condon?"

"Yes," said the father of the slain child. "It was the evening of March 9 or early in the morning of March 10."

"And through him did you receive these notes?"

"Yes, Dr. Condon brought these with him to our home in Hopewell that evening," he said.

Wilentz then offered three more ransom notes and their envelope as evidence. They were accepted.

Wilentz then took the ransom notes, passed them to Defense Counsel Reilly for brief scrutiny, and offered them as evidence.

"Did you authorize Dr. Condon to conduct ransom negotiations?" Wilentz resumed.

"Yes, I did," Lindbergh answered. One by one Wilentz presented the notes of that little ransom correspondence. Lindbergh examined them all carefully, even reading one or two of the letters to make positive identification.

"Yes, that is one of the notes," was his invariable reply.

"This was shown to me very shortly before the payment of the money in the cemetery," he said crisply in identifying one of the last letters the kidnaper sent to Jafale.

Wilentz showed Lindbergh a faded scrap of paper, a section of a photograph section.

"That," said Lindbergh, "is part of a wrapping paper I saw at Dr. Condon's home. In it was wrapped the sleeping suit."

Sleeping Suit on Exhibit

Wilentz showed the colonel a baby's sleeping suit suit.
"Wasn't that wrapped in that paper?" he demanded.

The colonel looked at the small suit long and quietly. After he had answered "Yes, that is right," he continued to gaze at the garment in which his son slept at the time of the kidnapping.

Hauptmann started intently at Lindbergh as the suit was placed as an exhibit.

Finally Lindbergh came to the final note, which immediately preceded the ransom payment.

"I was in Dr. Condon's home in the Bronx. It was April 2, 1935," he related, describing the arrival of that last note.

"I saw Dr. Condon walk to the table and from beneath it he got a note," Lindbergh related.

He said he did not see Dr. Condon get the note.

"As a result of that note did you and Dr. Condon then depart in an auto?"

"Yes, we did."
"Who was driving?"

"I was."
Wilentz asked if they had money with them.

"We had $70,000. It was wrapped in brown paper and packed in a wooden box."

"The time, colonel?"

"Approximately half past eight."
"You sat in the car while Dr. Condon went into the cemetery?"

"Yes."
"How far was the car from the cemetery?"

"About two or three hundred feet."
"Dr. Condon walked along the cemetery," Lindbergh continued, "and went to the corner."

"And you sat in the car with $70,000?"

"Yes. Dr. Condon stood at the corner a few moments and then turned back and started to walk back."

Heard The Voice
"Then I heard clearly a voice seeming to come from within the cemetery."

"And what did that voice say?"

"It said, 'Hey Doctor' it was a foreign accent."
"How many times did you hear that voice?"

"Only once."
"Since that night in St. Raymond cemetery did you hear that same voice?" Wilentz went on.

"Yes."
"Who was that voice?"

"Mr. Hauptmann's."

Hauptmann flushed slightly. A buzz went through the room, and the court, busy with notes on the

Dr. Fred A. Huhne Died Here Today

Widely Known Physician Had Been Engaged in Practice Here For Many Years With Office on Home Street—Had Been Member of Board of Health For Over Quarter of a Century.

Dr. Frederick A. Huhne, one of the oldest practicing physicians in Kingston, died today at his home on Home street. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Kathrine Huhne, a son, Carl A. Huhne of this city, and a sister, Miss Kathryn E. Huhne of New York. The body will be taken to the New York and New Jersey Crematory where services will be held in the chapel there.

Dr. Huhne had been practicing medicine in Kingston for many years. For over a quarter of a century he had served as a member of the Board of Health and in late years he had been one of the city physicians employed by the Board of Public Welfare. During the years he was a member of the Board of Health he had served continuously under all administrations. He always took an active interest in the health activities of the city, and during the many years he was a member of the health board he rarely missed a meeting. It was while he was a member of the health board that many important health measures in the city were enacted, and his advice was always sought by the other members of the board. Dr. Huhne was widely known as a capable physician, and was a man who was held in high esteem not only by the members of his own profession but by all with whom he came in contact. He was one of the oldest, if not the oldest practicing doctor in the city, and was widely known as a family physician and many of his patients had been under his care during all the years that he practiced his profession in Kingston.

assertion, paid no heed to the commotion.

Reilly blushed, smiled, called for a glass of water, and smiled again.

Mrs. Hauptmann paled and trembled slightly when the words were uttered.

Dr. Condon went off to confer with the kidnapper after the "Hoy Doktor" call.

"He returned in 10 minutes," Lindbergh said.

"Did you give him the money?"

"I gave him part of it," said the Colonel, explaining that Jafie suggested only $50,000 be paid.

He was asked to describe the box containing the ransom.

The Colonel described how he made fiddle air trips over the sea in the vicinity of Gay Head, Mass., where the kidnapper's note given to Condon when the ransom was paid
in the cemetery that night said the baby would be found.

The actual payment of the ransom required "10 or 15 minutes," he said.

Reviewing Lindbergh's fruitless

search for the baby following the ransom payment, Wilentz asked:

"How many were in the plane that searched?"

"I don't recall."

"Were you in the plane?"

"I piloted it."

Lindbergh then retold how he last saw the child the Sunday night two days before the kidnapping.

At Trenton Morgue.

Then came the story of that identification at midnight in a Trenton morgue.

"You saw that body?"

"Yes."

"It was your child?"

"Yes."

"So you did not get your money back and you didn't get your child back?"

"No," he said quietly.

At 10:53 Wilentz announced that the state was finished with Col. Lindbergh for this phase of its case, and offered the witness to the defense for cross-examination.

Reilly Starts Courtroom

Reilly opened his cross examination with a query that electrified the court.

"Colonel, are you armed?"

Wilentz leaped to his feet in vigorous objection.

"Object, your honor," the prosecutor shouted.

"I'll answer your honor," Lindbergh interrupted.

Trenchard nodded.

"I am not," the flier asserted in a low but firm voice.

Reilly promptly launched into a severe interrogation of the colonel with regard to the character of his household help.

"Mr. and Mrs. Wheatley were in your house the day the baby was kidnaped, were they not?"

"Yes."

"What investigation did you make into the reputation of Wheatley?"

"I talked to him."

"Beyond that?"

"Nothing."

"You didn't look into his background?"

"I don't recall."

"He was one of two present the day of the kidnapping who has since died."

"Yes, he died in the winter of 1933."

"You took Mrs. Wheatley the same way—without recommendation?"

"Yes."

Morrins Recommended Nurse

"Now, how did you get Betty Gow?"

"She came recommended by the Morrow household."

"Did you know she had any brothers?"

"No."

"You didn't know she had one brother in Canada and another who has been in trouble in New Jersey?"

"No."

Again the court buzzed. It was a morning of repeated sensations.

Reilly questioned Lindbergh closely with regard to household knowledge of his goings and comings.

"The knowledge of your movements, you might say, were known to your butler, the butler's wife and nurse maid?"

"Well, perhaps."

"Didn't you as a father make every effort to find out the background of the people in the house
the night your child was snatched away?" demanded Reilly sharply.

The state objected vigorously, but Justice Trenchard ruled Lindbergh could answer.

"I placed my confidence in the police," he replied.

"As a man of the world," boomed Reilly "you know police are not infallible."

The aviator looked at Reilly and said with a grin:

"— Very Good Police"

"I thought we had very good police."

A wave of hand clapping swept the court, and the justice rapped sharply for order, and warned the spectators.

"Isn't it a fact that no federal agent ever saw the ransom notes?"

"No. I know it's not a fact," Lindbergh retorted quickly.

"Isn't it a fact that this investigation since the day it started has been in the hands of the State Police?"

"That was the authority," he said, but explained there was perfect harmony among the police.

At Reilly's direction, Lindbergh traced on the map the way from the nursery to the kitchen wing.

The defense counsel sought to bring out that only the servants

knew the family movements, but Lindbergh said it was not the custom to tell the servants.

"Did the outside world know you were coming home Monday or going back to New York Tuesday?" Reilly shot.

The colonel turned slightly pink.

"No, very few knew it even now."

Reilly asked whether Lindbergh had a dog.

"Why yes, my mother gave us a dog."

"In Hopewell?"

"Yes."

"At the time of the kidnapping."

"Why yes."

"A good watch dog?" asked Reilly,
referring to the fox terrier at the Lindbergh home.

"I wouldn't say so," said the colonel.

Reilly then asked if the dog had given any sign there was a prowler about the house the night of the kidnaping.

"No, I wouldn't expect any from that dog," was the smiling reply.

Reilly asked the last part of the answer he stricken out and justice granted his motion.

Night of Kidnaping.

Reilly then had Lindbergh describe how he arrived home the kidnap night about 8 o'clock and went upstairs to wash before looking into the nursery where the little baby was asleep.

"Did you see Betty Gow when you went upstairs to the washroom a little after eight?"

"No."

"Then you went downstairs to dinner?"

"Yes."

"Did you sit in the dining room facing the doorway?"

"No."

"So the way you sat in the dining room you could not see the hallway?"

"Colonel, if you were in the dining room someone could have gone up that stairway, after having passed through the hallway and entered the door?"

"No."

Col. Lindbergh also said it would have been impossible for anyone in the house to have taken the child down the main stair case and out the front door without attracting the attention of himself or Mrs. Lindbergh, who were having supper in the dining room.

"Let's take the other course,
Colonel, then if there were disturbances in the house, someone in the house, it is possible, might have taken the baby out of the crib and out of the house?"

Lindbergh was slightly flustered.

"It is possible."

Controversy Averted

Wilentz arose when Reilly vigorously urged the aviator to answer
his questions.

Justice Trenchard intervened, upholding Reilly's questions as legiti-mate, and ended abortively a spirited controversy between the counsel.

"You did not enter the nursery at that time? You heard nothing suspicious," asked Reilly after Lindbergh told how at 9 o'clock he and Anne were in their bedroom adjoining the child's nursery.

"No," said the Colonel.

Then Reilly electrified the courtroom by inquiring:

"In the course of the investigation,
Colonel have you ever heard it said
you were the one to be kidnaped?"

Wilentz jumped to his feet.

"Just a minute just a minute," he snapped and made an objection to the question as irrelevant.

Justice Trenchard sustained the objection and the question was unanswered.

Wilentz said:

"I want it understood that the state will object to questions involving the Colonel's hearing rumors."

Reilly then directed the aviator to take the pointer and indicate to the jury on the charts the window out of which the baby was taken.

No Fingerprints

"Were there any fingerprints on the outside of that window?"

"I was informed at the time they did not locate any fingerprints.
There were smudges."

"Did you ever have any indication that your wires were being tapped?"

"No."

"Were any fingerprints ever found around the casement window?"

"No, that's my information."
"Who first approached the window after the baby was kidnapped?"
"Why, I did."
"Was it locked?"
"No, no one ever locked it."
"Was any stranger ever in your nursery?"
"Not as far as I know."

Describes Notes

Reilly then directed the witness to retell the story of the noise he and Mrs. Lindbergh heard after having dinner.

He asked him if it might be the sound of a book falling.
"No," said the witness. "It had the sound of wood on wood."
He went on to explain that by wood on wood he meant several pieces of wood, like a crate top falling.

"Do you recall if there was a piece of lumber in your library about 12 or 14 inches long?"

"I don't remember."
"Do you remember any shavings or nails or refuse being dumped near the house after they built it?"

"Well, yes, there was for a while."
Reilly, as he questioned Lindbergh with clear enunciation, so precise as to sound almost mechanical, faced the jury.

He talked to the jury, but Lindbergh answered. He noted with meticulous care the expression of each of the twelve.

"It didn't come from that direction," said Reilly, referring to the nursery.

"It didn't seem to come from any direction," Lindbergh said.

"You only heard one sound?"
"You couldn't call it one sound, I heard it only once," the boyish looking flier said, correcting the defense counsel.

He said he subsequently investigated in the kitchen and found nothing had crashed there.

Reilly brought out that the Lindbergh child had not been exposed to strangers, although Lindbergh pointed out the 20-month-old child went to school "with other children" at the little school Englewood.

"You heard no cry from the nursery?" asked Reilly, after finishing his queries on the crash of wood the Lindberghs heard.

"No."

Reilly changed tactics. Reilly suddenly developed a sympathetic turn.

"The little fellow had a cold, and you rubbed his tiny chest with ointment and put him to bed?"

"Yes."
"You petted him, when he cried or whined a little?"

"No."
Reilly asked if the Colonel ever feared his son might roll over on his face and smother in his crib.

"No, nor did I think it probable," Lindbergh answered.

Reilly then directed Lindbergh to review his testimony on how the kidnapping was discovered.

"I see, you were trying to train him to sleep when you put him to bed?" Reilly asked while questioning about picking the child up.

"Yes."

Reilly shifted his glance toward the jury box for a moment and then boomed forth.

"Don't you think it strange, Colonel, that the little fellow was put to bed with a cold at seven o'clock and no one looked at him until ten?"

Witnesses leaped up and objected. After a few minutes heated debate, Reilly conceded that the baby might have been put to bed later than seven o'clock, "seven-thirty or eight—I won't haggle over a few minutes."

Lindbergh again described how Betty Gow broke the news.

"She came down the stairs and asked me if I had the baby. I asked her if she wasn't in the crib and I immediately went up to the nursery."

Reilly suddenly shifted the questioning to the window out of which the baby was taken.

Not The Custom To Lock Windows
Lindbergh said it was not the custom to lock the windows at the Seward Mountain house.

His questioner demanded if anyone outside the family knew of this practice.

"No, I don't think so."
Reilly asked Lindbergh again how far it was between the window and crib.

"It was," Lindbergh estimated, "about 12 feet."

"What was Betty Gow's condition. How did she act in the room?" Reilly asked.

Lindbergh hesitated.

"Material?" Reilly pressed.

"No," the flier said.

"Yet she was closest to the child," Reilly said.

"Yes, she was with the child most," Lindbergh said.

Reilly turned to the first ransom note.

Reilly took up "state exhibit 17," the ransom note found at the nursery window. He handed it to Lindbergh.

"I understand you say you did not pick up this note?"

"No."
Lindbergh removed it from the wrapper and examined it.

"With a desire to preserve finger prints you allowed this note to remain on the nursery window?" asked Reilly.

Lindbergh said yes. He said Wolfe removed it. (Wolfe is the Hopewell chief of police.)

Ask About The Ladder
Reilly turned to the finding of the ladder, the impromptu foot made in the soft ground and other details.

Re asked about the weight of the ladder.

Lindbergh hesitated and finally said he thought the three sections would weigh 25 pounds.

"It could be carried under one arm?"

"You'd have to disconnect it, fold it up, wouldn't you?"

"I suppose so."

Reilly then returned to the matter of the first ransom note.

"Did Troncy Kelly keep it and the Superprints in his office?"

"I don't know for certain."

"Did you tell state police you didn't want them to investigate the case that you wanted to do it yourself?"

"No," Lindbergh replied.
He denied also he had asked to have federal agents removed, said on the contrary he had sought their aid.
Reilly asked about the people who came to the Hopewell estate after the kidnapping. Lindbergh speaking of the "first night" said there was no exact coordination until the New Jersey state police took over the case the day after the kidnapping.
Court recessed at 12:30 p. m.
Reilly said he expected to keep Lindbergh on the stand about an hour this afternoon.
"We are going ahead very rapidly," he declared, "and will probably have the opportunities to cross-examine the Colonel after other angles have been developed."

Luckies-Rosendale Battle This Evening

The much talked of game between Jack Troy's Luckies and Rosendale Firemen will go on tonight at White Eagle Hall, home court of the former club, which hopes to avenge a recent defeat handed out by Manager John Regan's fire eaters.

"I'm sure we can take 'em over," said "Dolly" Tassio this morning. "Rosendale has a good club and they beat us once, but I think the story will be different tonight." The Lucky pilot counts a lot on some new faces in his lineup to turn the tables. One of the newcomers is Bun Chilson, well known local star.

Manager Regan of the Rosendale club hopes to see his boys make it two straight over the Clover Kids. A win would not only add to the prestige of the Firemen but fortify them for their Saturday night tilt at Rosendale with Honey Russell's American Rollers.

The Lucky-Rosendale duel is scheduled for 8:30. The regular preliminary will go on at 7:30. Dancing will conclude the program.

Grand Jury Lands
County Officials

The following resolution commending the county officials also was filed by the grand jury which was in attendance at the December term of supreme court, and which recently reported:

Members of the grand jury in attendance at the December term of supreme court, which completed its labors today, give high praise to District Attorney Murray and Sheriff Saxe and to others connected with the enforcement of law and the conduct of the sheriff's office in Ulster county. The following resolution was handed up when the grand jury made its report to Judge Foster:

The members of the Ulster county grand jury, in attendance at the December term of supreme court, having completed the duties devolving upon them, wish before adjourning to place upon record their appreciation of the courteous and helpful treatment they have received from the various county officials with whom they have come in contact during their work.

Our work has been greatly expedited and the cause of justice aided by the able and competent manner in which matters coming before us have been handled by District Attorney Murray and his assistant, N. LeVan Haver. Their knowledge of the law, the careful preparation of cases and able examination of witnesses have done much to lighten our task and make easier for us the accomplishment of a considerable amount of work.

We commend District Attorney Murray and his assistant for the courtesy and consideration they have shown in the examination of witnesses sworn before our body and the fair as well as capable manner in which these examinations have been handled. We also extend our thanks to our stenographer, William P. Glass, who has not only proved himself capable and competent, but who has always been ready to give any assistance in his power.

To the court officers in attendance during our deliberations we also wish to extend our thanks.

The members of the grand jury have visited and made a careful inspection of the county jail and of the county court house generally and wish to commend Sheriff John H. Saxe for the excellent condition in which they found the county property. We found the jail clean and in fine sanitary condition, with every evidence of careful and orderly supervision of all its departments.

The prisoners confined in the county jail were apparently well cared for. We feel that Ulster county is to be congratulated upon the able administration being given by Sheriff Saxe and his assistants and for the manner in which the property of the county under their supervision is being cared for.

The Republican party, now pronounced dead, cast 13,000,000 votes in the November election, which was doing pretty well for a ghost.

Happiness Topic
Heard by Kiwanis

That the best form and most lasting of all degrees and kinds of happiness is that which is associated with "grasping the lever and aiding in pulling the world a degree or two higher," was the contention of the Rev. Dr. Goodrich Gates, pastor of the Elmendorf Street Presbyterian Church, who addressed members of the Kiwanis Club at the Governor Clinton Hotel Thursday noon in a New Year's program. Morris Sampson, recently elected president of the club, officiated for the first time.

Announcements were made for various program and committee actions and committee chairmen were notified.

The speaker in opening his remarks explained that there were many forms of happiness, the joy in killing a gangster, the delusion of a mentally deficient person that he was a notable of a past generation, self satisfaction and the "happiness of self sacrifice" which the speaker held to be the most lasting.

Mr. Gates believed that the world needs the men who will put their hands to the lever and by exerting a little pressure raise the standards of things around us, so that all may enjoy a more complete and lasting happiness.

The contention, he explained, was not a new one, having been expounded with considerable success by a certain "Carpenter of Bethlehem," who explained that "He who seeks to save his life shall lose it, but he who loses his life for my sake shall save it."

To conclude the program a debate question was raised with members taking sides. A good deal of argument ensued with the result that considerable thinking was done on the question at hand.

Paul Zucca, again chosen to head the music committee, was in charge of the songs, assisted at the piano by Danny Bitner.

Biplane and Monoplane

Everybody's Aviation Guide states that a monoplane is simpler and more efficient aerodynamically than a biplane of equivalent load-carrying capacity, and as its resistance is less it will fly with less power or attain higher speed with the same power. A biplane can be made lighter and stronger and have less wing spread than a monoplane of equivalent area; it is not as efficient because the placing of the planes one above the other lowers the effective lift. A biplane will have more parasitic resistance than a monoplane because of the interplane struts and bracing wires.

Card of Thanks

We wish to thank our many relatives and friends for their kindness extended to us during our recent bereavement in the sudden death of our father, Ethebert V. Miller. We also wish to thank for the beautiful floral tributes.

Officers Elected
By Masonic Club

The annual meeting of the Masonic Club of Kingston was held at the club house, 31 Albany avenue, Thursday evening, Arthur J. Burns, president of the club, presiding. Harry deBois Frey, treasurer, rendered his report for the year, showing a balance on hand for the new year. Elmer E. Swart, chairman of the house committee gave a detailed report of his stewardship, which includes quite a bit of business management and attention to details. The president briefly reviewed the work of the club for the year and expressed his appreciation of the interest taken by certain of the members in helping to care for the club property and giving of their time to its affairs.

In the election of three directors, for terms of three years each, the nominating committee presented a list of six candidates from which a choice was to be made. Roy M. Stutiff, Abram D. Relyea and Harry S. Sutton, the latter being a re-election, each received a majority of the votes cast and were declared elected.

Following the meeting the directors met and elected officers for the year as follows:

Some Fellow Fathers

The extent to which some follow the occupations of their fathers has been the subject of a series of studies made among 23,861 men in all walks of life in six different countries. The figures show that 451 out of every 1,000 men either take up the same kind of work as their father's or enter an occupation closely allied to it.—Culler's Weekly.

Mr. Holler stated, as is available to any customer on order at slight additional cost.

The new Master Deluxe cars also feature the new Flusher turret top all steel roof construction and a much larger body with corresponding increase in interior dimensions.

"Chevrolet was able to reduce its Standard model prices and maintain its price levels in the face of substantially increased material and manufacturing costs on the Master Deluxe series because of greatly increased volume scheduled for 1935 as indicated by the thousands of orders we now have on hand for immediate delivery of the 1935 cars from our organization of 10,000 dealers," Mr. Holler said in his price announcement.

Did you ever notice .. in a roomful of people .. the difference between one cigarette and another .. and wonder why Chesterfields have such a pleasing aroma

Many things have to do with the aroma of a cigarette ... the kind of tobaccos they are made of ... the way the tobaccos are blended ... the quality of the cigarette paper.

It takes good things to make good things.

Someone said that to get the right aroma in a cigarette, you must have the right quantity of Turkish tobacco—and that's right.

But it is also true that you get a pleasing aroma from the home-grown tobaccos ... tobaccos filled with Southern Sunshine, sweet and ripe.

When these tobaccos are all blended and cross-blended the Chesterfield way, balanced one against the other, you get a flavor and fragrance that's different from other cigarettes.
